ARTIST STATEMENT

Aaron Soleci (born 1988) is an artist born in Gibraltar, where he continues to live and work. He began drawing at an early age, first inventing cartoon characters as a child, and started painting seriously at sixteen. He studied a BTEC Foundation Diploma in Art and Design at Loughborough University before completing a BA (Hons) in Fine Art in 2013. His education introduced him to a range of disciplines and contemporary art, while confirming Fine Art as the field in which he could work with the greatest freedom.

Soleci's practice is driven by experimentation, spontaneity and the desire to keep moving forward. Rather than committing to a fixed style or subject, he follows ideas wherever they lead, allowing projects to develop through the act of making. His paintings shift in response to mood, lived experience, and the images, films and music that occupy his attention. Working from imagination, photographs and life, he makes works that range from vibrant and joyous to distorted and unsettled. The cartoon characters that occupied his childhood have increasingly found their way into his work, reconnecting his current practice with one of his earliest impulses to draw.

Drawing remains an essential part of his process: a way of registering the present moment, testing possibilities and opening paths towards future work. Yet drawings can also exist independently, as complete works in their own right. He works with acrylic for its plasticity and artificiality, and often draws in pen, allowing mistakes and decisions to remain visible. His approach can be fast or slow, depending on what a work demands; at times he scrapes away or destroys an image and begins again, seeking greater depth, tension and possibility.

Soleci's influences span painting and cinema. His visual references include Alberto Giacometti, Vincent van Gogh, Francis Bacon, Frank Auerbach, Alice Neel, Henri Matisse, Pablo Picasso, Philip Guston and Willem de Kooning. Films by Wim Wenders and Alejandro Jodorowsky, alongside Little Miss Sunshine and Gummo, have shaped his imagination.

Alongside painting, Soleci makes experimental hip-hop and deliberately rough, clumsy videos. These projects are another way to follow an idea, test possibilities and keep a continuous creative flow. When visual art needs breathing space, music and moving images offer a different route back into making.

For Soleci, art is a way of approaching what cannot easily be expressed in words— a continuing attempt to understand himself and respond to the world around him.
